How to Make Stuck - As we are now in the midst of the Sugar season, the following Connecticut Fire Ins. CO. article from a successful sugar maker, who makes each of his 600 trees bring him a dollars' worth of sugar, will be of interest to our farming readers :

As I have been asked thousands of times, at Narragansett F.& M.Ins.Co. As I have been asked thousands of times, at different Fairs, how I could make so white and hard Maple Sagar, (equal to the best loaf,) my reply has been, that two words would tell the whole process,—one of them being clean and the other quick,—which you must always bear in mind, and practice from beginning to end.

My sagar works consist of 500 trees, part first tool and a country works of the first growth.

and part second growth, most of the first growth trees having been tapped over 70 years, my children being the fifth generation on the "old Capital and Surplus, homestead." I now use all tin buckets, finding them much ahead of all others, baying used all kinds, from the old sap trough down to the late patent pine bucket.

Tues the patent iron sap-spout, Heeox, Paten-tee, H. S. Morse of Shelburn, agent for Ver-mut, which I greatly prefer over all others, for CAPITAL AND SURPLUS, $194,103 front, which a greatly preserved as sweral reasons. First, when you once get them, if taken care of as they should be, you always have them, and they are always ready. Second, one iron spout in the same sized hole, will run more sap than two wooden once; at the same fime will not cause the sap to be sour or slimy until the end of the srason, and is a perfect fit to each tree, causing no loss of mp by leakage. The sap, with the iron spout, commences to run on an average of half an hour earlier in the morning, and running from one to two hours later at night, with this spout than with any other I ever tried. I use a five-eightis inch centre sugur. The spout, when driven with a centre sugar. Inc spour, when driven with a small wooden mallet, which is all the tools you need, (except an are when tapping large first growth trees, to take off the loose outside bark,) passes through the bark, and not over two of the outside grains of wood. Therefore you need not bore much deeper than the Agriculturist man cuts his "incision" "V shaped," with his mallet and "wide chisel."

And another very important item is, you dis-pease with all spikes or nails to hang up your bucket, hanging it directly on the spout—which brings it up close to the tree and spout, causing orings it up come to the tree and spout, causing no loss of sap by wind. This is the fifth season I have used these spouts, and in that time! have never found one pulled from the tree by the bucket. With those spouts (iron) you can tap your sugar orchard in less than one-half the time than by any other method I ever any used. I disagree entirely from the Agriculturist writer, in the placing of buckets upon the ground or show. They should always be hung up to the tree, if the tree is tapped high or low.

I use the sheet iron sap pan or paus, and I shall, another year, put in the tubular heater. which I think a great improvement above all others in making sugar. When my sup goes from the gathering tub or casks into the receiv-er, it all passes through a cloth strainer, to re-move all back or leaves that may fall or blow into the sap previous to or while gathering.—
Then it is boiled down to syrup as seen as dry trood and a live man to tend it can do it, in batches of six to eight pailsfull. The syrup dropping in flakes or drops of about one inch wide from the dipper, just at the time you re-move the pans from the fire, by crame and pul-leys. At one end of the pan I have a wooden leys. At one call of the pan I layer a weeken cask stand, of two feet square arabour feet high, and in the upper part three commers, one eight inches below the other. The first or top one is made of "cheese cloth," the next of this flannel; the third or bottom one being of firm and heavy flannel. Each strainer is three-fourths of a yar", square. A strong cord is tied firmly around each of the four corners, and then tied in a long or many to be strained to hooks then tied a a loop, so as to be attached to hooks in each corner of the cusk for that purpose.—
Each strainer when suspended will hold about wenty quarts before running over. As soon as the part is removed from the first dip the syrup more fixed with the surper strainer. I use a immediately into the upper strainer. I use a large brass kettle for receiver under the lower strainer. Do not try to force syrup through receiver from eight to twelve hours, there the syrup will all have passed through the lower strainer, and also settled. Then pour off the syrup, and much the strainers ready for an other batch of syrup

I then take the syrup to the house to clarify and faish off. I use a galvan and tren pan, twenty-six by thirty inches square, and seven inches deep, to "sugar off" with, over my Promisens may be paid singly or in five or ten armust payments, at option of the assured. Then remove the syrup from the fire, and pass again through a cloth strainer, to remove all specks in the syrup.-For syrup, the paly method I have found, is to take a small quantity in a dish and star until cool. My syrup I have to weigh from 10 to 11 lbs to the gallen, usually 102. For grained or tob sugar, take a dish of clear, cold water, and drop in some hot sugar from the pan, and if it will not unite with the water, but cleave to the bottom of the dish or to the spoon, it is done sufficient for tub sugar. To form white or "leaf" sugar, I do down to tub sugar-have can made of tin, that will hold 150 liss, bottom made tunnel shape, and set in a sack. Fill nearly full. When first poured in, stop up the lower hole with a round stick, reaching above the top of the sugar, so that reaching above the top of the sugar, so that when cold, it can be withdrawn. After the same is taken out, take a white flannel cloth, which when folded two or three thicknesses will cover all the sugar; ruses in clear cold water every day, and ring so it will not run water; then spread over the sugar, and place on the cover. Continue until white. In common years, I make on an average five pounds of grained sugar to each tree, using three men and one team three weeks from the day the buckets (600) are taken from the garret until they are returned.

For the last four years, the price has averaged 16 2-2 cents per pound. This spring sugar is 20 to 22 cents per pound, syrup $2 to $3 per Warranted to give a superior light at one half the expense of ordinary eval gas.

We would call the attention of the public to the merits of this Machine, as seen in constant operation at our salesmout, believing that it needs but to be understood to come into very general use with all who appropriate the value of a first rate gas light, which can be obtained from Ketosene Oil, Many ingenious methods have been adopted for enabling individuals to manufacture their own gas. The use of any of these methods invoives a large ontiay, for the construction of the works and unidentified to contain them; a constant care and no inconsiderable labor and expense on operating them and keeping them in repair. We think the automatic Gas Machine is free from any of these objections. Call and examine.

Dr. Storres Dealing to acknowledge my sincerethanks for the great benefit my wife has received from the use of your raimonary liabule. I take the liberty of addressing you. She has been very severely afflicted with Asilima, at times only fering very much from distressed resolution, at which times I have called the best Physicians to prescribe for her, but without benefit. A friend advised me to try a bottle of your Haisman, and I am happy to say that by the use of one small locities the has entirely recovered.

With sincere gratitude, I remain, yours,
